Friendships Flatter

Hang on to good friends because they are hard to come by. Good friends are precious, valuable, gems that are rare to find. They love us, protect us, make us smile, and are our closest confidant. Life is so much more joyful with good friends. When you are able to find those precious gems, hold on to them and cherish them.

A good friend knows all your stories.
A best friend helped you write them.

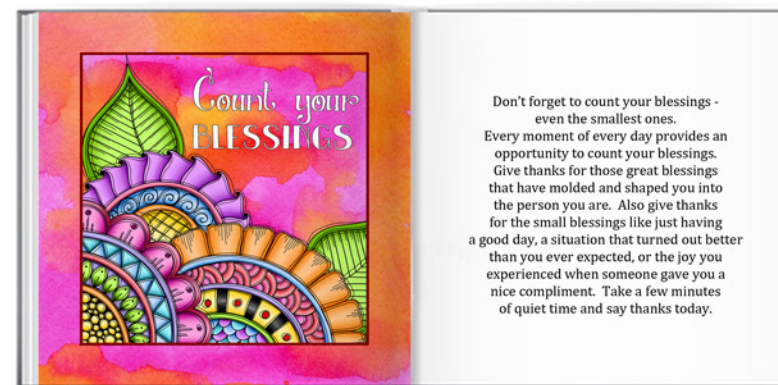

Thank goodness for friends as they are so much fun. Think back on the happiest or funniest moments in your life and it probably involves a friend. What a joy it is to have someone to share your thoughts and dreams with as well as the crazy stunts that you are amazed you survived. Nothing can replace a good friend as friendships bring out the best in us all.

Family is important.

Love your family members, even when they make you crazy. Family is so important. There is no replacement for those you share the same name and lifeblood. However, sometimes family members can be a challenge and it's hard to overlook those "challenges" they bring. Nevertheless, in spite of everything, love them with all your heart and let them know they are loved.

Count your BLESSINGS

Don't forget to count your blessings - even the smallest ones. Every moment of every day provides an opportunity to count your blessings. Give thanks for those great blessings that have molded and shaped you into the person you are. Also give thanks for the small blessings like just having a good day, a situation that turned out better than you ever expected, or the joy you experienced when someone gave you a nice compliment. Take a few minutes of quiet time and say thanks today.

If the road is difficult, there is usually something special at the end of it. Life's road is difficult. It's an excellent journey but it is tough. Always remember that rough times don't last forever. There truly is light and better times ahead and it will be better than you ever imagined. Therefore, stay strong and persevere on until that something special comes your way.

Always be kind to others as you don't know what they are dealing with in their own lives. Kindness is such a small but profound act that can truly make a difference in another life or situation. Kindness shown to someone during their time of struggle is something that will be remembered for an eternity. It is a true gift of human compassion.

Don't be afraid to face a difficult situation because you are much stronger than you think. Being faced with a difficult situation is never pleasant. Instead of looking at it as being a problem, maybe it's an opportunity to learn something profound about yourself. It's also an opportunity to realize your true inner strength you never thought existed. Give yourself a chance.

Love and respect yourself because you are worthy of such love. It seems it's always easier to love others and not care as much for yourself. Loving and respecting yourself is the foundation for being able to love others. Take care of yourself and love and respect yourself because you are just as important and worthy of that love that you give to others.

Always live each day like it's the last day you will have to share with others. Love deeper, hug longer, laugh with pure joy, and smile the kind of smile that shows others you appreciate them. Tell your loved ones you love them and prove that love through actions and not just words. Make every moment of every day count while making positive impacts on others.

Be yourself. There's no better person in the world you can be than yourself. You are a part of the world as a whole. The world needs you with all your skills, talent and personality. If you try to be someone else, you can't fulfill your purpose in what you are needed for in the world's bigger picture. We all need you to be you.

Be confident and in control of yourself. Self-confidence and control is a strong and sometime elusive thing. At times we are strong and in control and then at times, it seems to slip away when we need it most, leaving us weak and confused. Always remember to choose to keep confidence in yourself and don't let others take it from you.

Every day is a gift. Choose wisely on how you will use your gift. You can choose to be happy and have a gratifying day or you can choose to be angry with feelings that go astray. By choosing to take the high road and making positive choices, pleasant memories are created for a beautiful life's journey.
